Volunteers serving the community throughout the year.

About Us

Medical Reserve Corps Program

Launched in July 2002 in response to the President's call for all Americans to offer volunteer service in their communities.

A component of the Citizens Corps, the Medical Reserve Corps is a national network of volunteers dedicated to making sure their families, homes, and communities are safe from terrorism, crime, and disasters of all kinds.

Aims to strengthen communities by enlisting healthcare and non-healthcare volunteers to offer their knowledge and expertise throughout the year.

Facts about Delaware Medical Reserve Corps

Comprised of volunteers who support the Delaware Division of Public Health throughout the year in the areas of education, outreach, and health services.

Members are especially important during times of public health emergencies or disasters.

Things You Do

Delaware Medical Reserve Corps Involvement

There are many roles the Delaware Medical Reserve Corps volunteer can play to support everyday public health initiatives as well as during emergency and disaster events. Here are a few examples:

- Assist in the operation of community treatment centers, called Neighborhood Emergency Help Centers [NEHCs]
- Aid Delaware hospitals in the operations of alternate care facilities, such as Acute Care Centers [ACCs]
- Help support immunization campaigns
- Provide information and educate the community through health fairs and other venues to increase awareness of the importance of individual and family preparedness
- Assist in the timely investigation and control of communicable disease spread

Training: All volunteers will be invited to attend educational seminars, trainings, workshops, and exercises.
