

The Stockley Center — and YOU.

The Stockley Center has a long and valued history in service to our State's residents. While the center near Georgetown continues to serve the needs of some Delawareans with disabilities, the potential to use the state land and facilities to improve the health and well-being of all of Sussex County's residents exists.

If the Stockley Center and its surrounding property were open to all in Sussex County, how do you think you, your family or members of your community might use the facilities and outdoors to improve health and well-being?
