

Module 16: Co-Occurring Disorders: Treatment and Supports for Person with Mental Health and Substance Use Disorders

Post Test answers

1. People with combined mental and substance use conditions are very common in mental health settings? True
2. The recovery model has been in place in the mental health and substance abuse treatment fields for approximately the same length of time.
False
3. The Quadrants of Care Model is a useful framework for coordinating mental health and substance abuse treatment needs. True
4. The Twelve Step abstinence model is widely used by substance abuse providers and has much to offer the mental health field. True
5. Mental health staff all should have a working knowledge of the substance abuse 12 Step Model as it provides very strong support for self help, consumer run recovery services, and a practical behavioral step-wise model to address any serious illness on a daily basis. True
6. Integrated treatment allows for mental health and substance abuse treatment needs to be addressed simultaneously rather than sequentially: True